

College students need a way to efficiently monitor foot traffic in on-campus dining halls to make informed decisions on where to eat and better manage their limited time. I can allow users to pick their favorite places to eat on campus and list their levels of typical business around the time they want to eat in order to help their decision. I can also implement a map that takes the user's current location and gives an approximate walking time to each dining hall.